ARCHITECTURE EXAMP. PAINTING.

Six-Alfred Bast has read this woo before - the a Royal - methods of a Height A obtracts a paper to the application of comur to architecture a problem which has Deves perhaps boots completely solved since erchitecture consect in he he dominent art having a complete control of other arts. Even jer the case of the greatest examples of Italian mural painting we are apt to forget the architecture in looking at the pictures. The Sisting Chapel seems to exist for its frescoon although they are a mirable decoration. The Modica Chapel in Florence is only a delightfully painted room. The Schule di San Rocco is a picture gallery, and so is that part of the Vaticar adorned by Raphael's freedom. In all these owes the printer is predominant; and, howover wonderful or delightful his work may be, the problem of the application of colour to architecture is not solved because the building only exists to provide a surface for STAL Bedroom Furniture, Lines, etc., pictures. Further, these triumphs of . painting have misled the art of pictorial decoration ever since. Wherever it has been practised the architect and the painter have usually worked as independent artists, each with a different aim. After the a chitect has finished with a building the painter has entered it and done what he could to turn it into a picture gallery; and often a number of different painters have been amployed, as in the Pantheon in Paris, or in our own Houses of Parliament, each of whom has painted his own picture, with as little regard for the rest or for the build ing itself as if he were painting an easel > picture for an exhibition. Now, it is quite cortain that, where colour is used at all to decorate a building. it should be used systematically throughout. The effect of a series of mural paintings in a large interior otherwise uncoloured is merely to distract the eye from the whole interior to the patches of painting. Considered in their relation to that interior they are, however excellent as pictures, meru irrelevant masses of colour, which as Sir alfred East remarked, usually conflict with the architectural effect of the whole. In fact, the finer the interior as architecture, the more irrelevant and distracting domoral paintings usually appear. There is a-discord of two arts where there should be a harmony, or where one should reign alone. And yet whonever architecture has been the predominant art it has nearly always used colour as an instrument of its own, whether in the form of paint or mount or stained glass ... But in such cases the decora or has been either the servant of the architect or subject to an archi tectural tradition which entirely controlled the practice of his own art; and this tradition has always been of the greatest possible benefit to the decorator, preserving him both from mere virtuosity and from prossic initation. MEDIETAL STAINED-GLASS WINDOWS, for instance, are beautiful both in colour VALUABLE JEWELL and in design because they are always conceived both as windows and as a system of colour decoration to the whole interior: Nor did this tradition of subordination prevent either windows or mossics from being in the highest degree expressive and interesting in themselves. Indeed, it was only when they began to imitate pictures that they became dull. "For them service was perfect freedom; and independence meant alayery to laws which did violence to their whole nature. The moral, theu, is that the architect should always be the master of his own house; but unfortunately architects have so long ceased to think of colour decoration as their business that it is not natural to them to design in colour; and a building which is not made to be coloured cannot be coloured satisfacturily. Sir Alfred East remarked that in many decorated public buildings the areas of the different colours employed were not in keeping with the scale of the building. In such cases the decorator often has an impossible problem because the architect, in designing his building, has not seen it coloured. We may doubt, for instance, whether Wren ever in his mind's eye saw. St. Paul's colour.d. He ptobably, like to many great Repaissance architects, designed entirely in spaces. In fact, our specialisation o the arts makes their complete harmony at present impossible, because the architect is not a colourist and cannot exercise the necessary control over colour, at any rate. n ambitious buildings, Therefore, if we are to learn how to apply colour rightly to buildings, we had best begin as unambitiously as possible upon interiors with little spenitectural pretention. But the pelit ing in such a case must be as unambitious as the architecture. We do not want a hall or a school room decorate ! with pictures of Boadices preaching revolt agai at the comens, or of Eternity giving lessons to Time. Indeed, we do not want pictures painted apon the walls at all. Rather we went the walls decora ed investigations into the Absolute

Some remarkable experiments were shown by Sir Jumes Dewar before the members of the Royal Institution, to il lustrate his lecture on some problems connected with extraordinarily low temperstures. Research on this subject, which had been a very prominent feature of the work at the Institution, had now, he said, spread very widely in scientific circles and in the race for the absolute zero-273 deg centigrade-scientists on the Continent had outstripped workers at home. All modern investigation dealt with temperstures between 10deg, above the absolute zero and 2deg. above, liquid helium boiling at 3deg. above the absolute zero. To measure such temperatures with accuracy, helium could be employed to within 8deg. of the absolute zero. By using helium, a temperature of within 2 deg. of the absolute zero had been obtained, and if a body as volatile as any compared with helium as the latter was when compared with hydrogen could be discovered, invesigators could get within half a degree of the absolute zero, but no nearer. In all use of low temperatures very carefully isolated vessels had to be employed. It was nineteen years ago that night that vacuum vessels were lirst placed upon the was a great disappointmen to Sir James that the industry of manufacturing-them was not localised in England, but he could find no one in this country able to manufacture them. The result was that the whole of the orders had gone to another country which had developed the industry, and doctors employed these foreign made vessels to take liquid oxygen to p tienta. In the course of an experiment Sir James pointed out the possibility of error owing to the mobility of liquid air, and to illustrate it he hoisted a piece of apparatus to the roof of the lecture theatre. Despite the warm temperature of the room, very fine drops of liquid air fell as drops from the cailing to the floor, and splashed on a blackened board. "Very fine drops," said the lecturer, "will be carried a very lon: way," and as he spoke one fell on his head. Drops of liquid hydrogen in falling condensed the air, and formed rings of solid air, which were plainly visible as they

SUGGESTIONS FOR PROPRIETORS.

Don't talk about your competitor. Don't waste valuable moments on details hat a subordinate can handle.

Don't walk a mile to save a nickel if you value your time more than five pennies. Don't wait for fortune to smile on you. Fortune doesn't smile all the time. She usually favours those who hustle and not those who wait.

Don't show yourself too anxious to get an order. The customer will see it in your manner, and he will make the hargain not you.

Don't work all the time. Remember even machinery needs rest, Don't be satisfied with the customers you have without attempting to get more. The successful man uses a follow up letter and other means to secomplish this purpose, Don't worry about things that may appen. They may be opportunities, not rials, by the time they reach you.

FIGHTING IN LANCASHIRE

(Reuter's Service to the China Mail.) LONDON, March 14.

Three police have been injured by stones and sont to the hospital after a Aght with a mob of miners at Haydock, near St. Helens, Lancashire.

THE PROBLEM.

Mr Herbert Sumuel, speaking at banquet of the Chambers of Commerce, said it was not easy for any Government to compel a million men to work when they were determined not to work. Although there was at present certainty of an early peace, at least there was a movement along the road leading to peace.

FROM BAD TO WORSE.

The reports regarding the negotiations are confused and perplexing, but opinion generally is more pessimistic. There is even talk of a complete deadlock.

The hopes of peace based on the miners' statement of yesterday morning were dissipated by evening when explanations of the statement whose terms were obscure were current to the effect that it simply restored the original position.

HUGE RAILWAY LOSS ES.

The returns of the twenty-four leading milway companies last week show an aggregate decrease of gross receipts amounting to £500 000. This lis a more severe loss than on the occasion of the railway strike. Eighty-five per cent of the decrease is in goods traffic.

BLOODSHED IN GERMANY

Policemen shot and killed two strikers while quelling disturbantes on Westphalian coalfield.

TROUBLE IN AMERICA.

Reuter's New York, correspondent reports that the anthracite conlowners have "refused to grant the men a 40 per cent. increase in wages on the ground that it would mean an increase of 40 cents per ton in the cost of coal.

SITUATION SUMMED UP.

LORDON, March 15. Although each day incresses the tale of the unemployed, it is difficult to detail the effect of the strike on the different industries.

Beyond the inconveniences of crowded trains and trams, Londoners are but little affected, while things have gons on much as usual up to the prement over most of the country owing to the large stocks of coal which were sconmulated prior to the strike, though pobody apparently knows their extent, which probably varies greatly.

Moreover, the supplies of coal are being eked out in several cities, notably at Bradford, by short time.

The cotton trade is working from hand to mouth.

Largely owing to the lack of transport for raw materials, the potteries, shipping, fisheries, and the iron and steel trades are being practically extinguished.

Bood has advanced but very little, (Router's Service to the China Mail.) except fish.

ATTEMPT ON KING OF IT LY.

ASSAILANT NEARLY LYN CHED.

(Router's Service to the China Mail. LONDON, March 15.

A message received from Reuter's Rome correspondent states that a man fired several shots at His Majesty the King of Italy yesterday, but His. Majesty was not injured.

The assailant was arrested; he is Herald and later of the Peking Daily named Dalbar The attempt is not believed to be the result of a plot, but merely the work of an individualist anarchist. The crowds deliriously cheered Their Majesties on their escape, and the King later drove in an open motor to visit Major Lang at the hospital. The last-named was wounded by the shots fired at His Majesty.

DETAILS.

Details of the affair show that Their Yesterday's discussions are reported to Majesties the King and Queen were King Humbert. They were acunder Major Lang when the man Dallia fired three time at the Royal carriage in the Via Lata.

Major Lang was wounded and fell from his horse, his injuries necessitating his removal to hospital.

Dalba was immediately seized and almost lynched. He was unable to

His Majesty the King went through the service at the Pantheon without displaying any signs of emotion.

POPULAR INDIGNATION.

After the attempt there were everywhere demonstrations of loyalty and indignation, and Their Majesties had to continuously appear on the balcony of the Royal Palace in response to the loyal shouts of the crowd.

[Note-King Victor Emmanuel III, the reigning Monarch is the third constitutional King of Italy. He was born on November 11th, 1869, and is therefore 42 years of age. He has occupied the Throne for nearly 12 years, succeeding King Humbert Ist. The latter, it will be recalled, was assassinated at Monza on July 29th, 1900, by the somethist Bresci. King Victor Emmanuel III was married in 1896 to Princess Helene of Montenegro, and there are four children by the marriage As Crown Prince of Naples be visited Queen Victoria with his Princess in 1897 and took part in the Damond Jubilee celebrations. THE VERDICT:

Lordon, March 15.

In the sensational poisoning case Sea mentioned in the London papers on January 17th, Mr Seddon has been sentenced to death for the murder of Miss Barrow with arsenic from fly. papers, while Mrs Seddon, who was also charged, has been acquitted.

[Note-The socused were w Frederick Henry Seddon, described as district supt. of the London and Manchester Insurance Co. and his wife, Mrs Margaret Ann Boodon: They were omigintly disrand with the morder of his Hira Mar Barrow, 49, by administering amenic o ton states that the Senate has ecopted or about September 14 last. The accused resided at 62. Tollington park, Holloway and Miss Barrow lodged with them. Th TO THE TANK AND THE PARTY OF STREET avidance went to anow that Miss. Burrows death was due to poisoning by arsenic" Although the decemed woman had lodged in the prisoners bould for a bemparatively short period it was alleved that the male prisoner had obtained great influence over ber and ind taken charge of her money affairs. He allowed free an amplify.
